Response

The University does not hold a list of specific job roles that our occupational health provider allows autistic people to undertake, nor roles from which they are excluded.

The needs of, and any reasonable adjustments required for an individual are assessed at the recruitment stage. Our Occupational Health team are keen to accommodate any employee with health and/or disability needs, including autism, and work closely with our line managers to facilitate this.

The University has been certified as a Disability Confident Employer. As a member of the Disability Confident scheme, we promise to interview any disabled applicant who meets the essential criteria for the advertised post.
